

Elite Webb Capital Smaller Companies Income & Growth Fund

Fund Manager's Commentary

The unit price made modest progress during the month. This comes as no surprise as investor returns have been exceptionally good in the year to date. The period between the end of May and mid-August also tends to be a quiet period for markets.

News from our companies has met our expectations albeit share price valuations are no longer cheap and gains are less easy to achieve. Your Manager believes that markets are firmly in the zone where stock picking can deliver a competitive edge. The long standing upward trend in smaller company markets looks vulnerable as housing demand slows and interest rates rise. It is times like this when experience of past cycles proves invaluable to me as a Fund Manager. Accurately judging what will happen next is going to be a chance to shine!

The number of cyclical sectors now experiencing more challenging trading includes motors, retail and housing. These sectors have already experienced a derating relative to those sectors still enjoying growth. However, I fear that there is further pain to come from these sectors in a rising interest rate environment. After all, they are all inexorably linked by one thing and that is consumer demand.

Largely due to the uncertainty of Brexit and likely outcomes for the UK economy, Sterling has been weak (apart from an occasional blip) versus the Euro and USD. Global capital investment has been strong as many countries are in late cycle and funds for investment are at highs. UK companies selling abroad to this sector continue to do very well. The US looks a particularly good market right now.

Financials is a potential sector for growth. The Major UK Banks have ceased to offer the services to consumers and SME's that they once did. The scale of this change is alarmingly large and new companies have emerged to take on this challenge. However, a tightening consumer belt will have implications for impairments and only the very best run companies will be worthy of support.

A clear pointer to heady late cycle markets is the number of IPO's and secondary fund raisings taking place. M&A activity is about to boom!

If I ever had a deal to make my mind boggle it is minnow Caretech Holdings (the specialist social care provider valued at circa. £290m) bidding for rival Cambian (the children service's provider at almost £400m). The former's great track record will be on the line if it captures this giant! These are interesting times!
